Nadal wins record-stretching 12th French Open title

2 Defying the years and one of the most fierce onslaughts he has ever faced at Roland-Garros, Rafael Nadal won his 12th French Open crown on Sunday, leaving Dominic Thiem crushed and a packed Parisian stadium shaking their heads in wonder. The first set had been one for the ages, the second ran it close, but after three hours and one solitary minute all that mattered was that Nadal was once again in familiar pose, flat on his back in the clay, a 6-3 5-7 6-1 6-1 winner to clinch his 18th Grand Slam triumph in total. For much of this final, rarely, if ever, has any opponent played so well against Nadal on this Philippe Chatrier center court. Rarely, if ever, has the best of the young guns Thiem struck the ball so firmly, or played with such purpose and aggression. But it wasn't enough as Thiem ultimately ran out of steam.

Jimmy Carter resumes teaching Sunday school

3 Former President Jimmy Carter resumed teaching Sunday school at Maranatha Baptist Church in his hometown of Plains, Georgia, on Sunday after recovering from hip surgery, a spokeswoman for the Carter Center said. WSB-TV streamed Carter's lecture, showing the 94-year-old ex-president smiling and talking while seated in a white cushioned chair at the podium. He was released from the hospital on May 16 after falling and breaking his hip as he was preparing to leave for a turkey-hunting trip, the Carter Center said at the time. Carter has lived longer after leaving the White House than any former president in U.S. history. Carter was governor of Georgia before being elected president in 1976. He was defeated in his re-election bid by Republican Ronald Reagan in 1980. He won the Nobel Peace Prize in 2002. REUTERS

Defective 3M Combat Arms™ Earplugs.

Fodera & Long is investigating claims on behalf of United States servicemen and women who have experienced hearing loss and tinnitus.

In July 2018, the United States Justice Department announced it reached an agreement with 3M for $9.1 million to resolve claims that it sold defective earplugs to the United States government for all branches of the United States military. According to the government's allegations, 3M Combat Arms™ earplugs were sold to the United States government as part of a multi-million dollar per year contract but did not meet required safety specifications.

3M Combat Arms™ earplugs were developed to provide soldiers a single set of earplugs that could be worn in either an "unblocked" position (yellow end in) to significantly reduce, the loud impulse sounds of battle, while still allowing the soldier to hear quieter noises such as commands or enemy dialogue. The earplugs can also be worn in a "blocked" position (olive/brown end in) to significantly reduce, all sounds.

As a result, from 2003-2015 thousands of United States military members were provided with 3M Combat Arms™ earplugs that did not adequately protect their hearing, causing many to suffer some form of hearing loss or tinnitus.

If you were active in any branch of the military any time between 2003 and 2015 and believe you suffered some of hearing loss or tinnitus (ringing in the ears), please contact Fodera & Long via email at info@foderalawfirm.com or call us at 215-569-1212 extension 1.

More details to come on Mexico immigration deal, Trump says

The agreement would immediately expand the Migration Protection Protocols implementation.

President Donald Trump defended his administration's deal with Mexico against criticism that there were no major new commitments to stem a flow of Central American migrants crossing into the United States, and said on Sunday more details would soon be released.

Key aspects of the agreement are still unclear, including whether Mexico has pledged to buy more U.S. agricultural products and if the deal materially expanded a previous commitment by Mexico to more vigorously police its southern border with Guatemala.

Top Democratic senators said many aspects of the deal were not new, while the Mexican ambassador to the United States declined to confirm whether it contained any commitments on agricultural goods.

"Importantly, some things not mentioned in yesterday [sic] press release, one in particular, were agreed upon."
President Trump

The deal, announced on Friday after three days of talks in Washington, averted Trump's threatened imposition of 5 percent import tariffs on all Mexican goods that had been due to start on Monday unless Mexico committed to do more to help reduce an increase in migrants arriving at the U.S. southern border.

"Mexico was not being cooperative on the Border ... and now I have full confidence, especially after speaking to their President yesterday, that they will be very cooperative and want to get the job properly done," Trump said on Twitter.

"Importantly, some things not mentioned in yesterday [sic] press release, one in particular, were agreed upon. That will be announced at the appropriate time," he added.

Trump did not elaborate and the White House and State Department did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Friday's joint communique broadly sketched the terms of the agreement, but contained few details.

The agreement expedites a controversial program known as the Migration Protection Protocols which was announced in December. That program sends migrants seeking asylum in the United States to wait in Mexico while their cases are being processed.

Friday's agreement would see the United States immediately expand the implementation of the MPP across its entire 2,000-mile southern border, the State Department said on Friday.

The deal will also see Mexico deploy the National Guard police force to its southern border, where many Central American migrants enter Mexico.

On Saturday, a New York Times report, citing officials from both countries familiar with the negotiations, said most of Friday's deal had already been sketched out in March, when Mexico agreed to deploy its National Guard throughout the country, with priority given to the southern border. REUTERS

California utility to cut power to 27,000 customers

The shut-off includes parts of Paradise, which was destroyed by fire a year ago.

Utility PG&E Corp. planned to proactively shut off power on Saturday to 27,000 customers in Northern California due to an increased risk of wildfires, officials said.

The shutdown was to begin at 9 p.m. local time in and around the Sierra Foothills, an area spanning parts of Butte, Yuba, Nevada, El Dorado and Placer counties northeast of San Francisco and near the border with Nevada, the utility said on Twitter.

The area includes portions of Paradise, the town that was destroyed by November's deadly wildfire known as the Camp Fire, which killed more than 80 people.

PG&E said this year it would significantly expand the practice of shutting off power to communities at risk of wildfire when conditions demand it, despite objections from some consumer advocates who said such disruptions can harm vulnerable people such as those who need electricity for medical equipment.

PG&E has been in touch with people in the affected areas who rely on power for their medical equipment, Adam Pasion, a spokesman for the utility, said in a phone interview.

"We certainly recognize the risk and are only doing this in the most extreme circumstances we feel that we need to," Pasion said.

Earlier on Saturday, the utility shut down power to around 1,600 customers just north of San Francisco, in Napa, Solano and Yolo counties, also due to the risk of wildfires after forecasters said a combination of strong winds, dry conditions and warm temperatures raised the fire danger.

But conditions improved, allowing the utility to begin restoring power to those customers, Pasion said.

The utility sought bankruptcy protection in January after facing billions of dollars in liabilities stemming from the Camp Fire, California's deadliest and most destructive wildfire in modern times.

State investigators concluded that PG&E's power lines caused the fire, which leveled nearly 19,000 homes and other structures and caused some $16.5 billion in losses. REUTERS

Jefferson Health expert talks ins and outs of liver/kidney transplant

Jefferson Health
HOME OF SIDNEY KIMMEL MEDICAL COLLEGE

ASK JEFFERSON HEALTH:

Securing both a liver and kidney transplant from the same donor isn't always easy, but the experts at Jefferson Health are making it a reality for many. Metro caught up with Warren R. Maley, M.D., director of the Jefferson Transplant Institute, to break down the details of liver/kidney transplants.

What's the allocation process like if you're waiting for a liver and a kidney?

In order to be listed for both, you have to be on both waiting lists, and there's specific criteria for liver patients who also require a kidney. One of the interesting things about liver disease is that as liver disease worsens, it starts to affect kidney function. So people who have very severe liver disease will often have kidney dysfunction, and some of them will even end up on dialysis. If they're on dialysis for a sufficient length of time, they'll sometimes require a kidney transplant. The good news is that some people who get their liver transplanted soon enough end up experiencing kidney recovery and don't need the kidney transplant.

What if that's what you're hoping for, but your kidneys don't recover?

There's actually a new method in the allocation system that gives you access to something referred to as the "safety net." If you take a liver alone hoping that your kidneys will recover, and they don't, you will receive prioritization on the kidney transplant waitlist.

If you need both organs, are both transplants done at the same time?

Usually patients receive the liver transplant, then the kidney transplant is done after that from the same donor. There are theoretical advantages to this. It's thought that it may be more difficult to reject the kidney if you get both organs from the same donor because liver rejection is less common than kidney rejection. The line of thinking is that the body may not reject the kidney quite as easily if there's also a liver from the same donor. Rejection of the two organs usually takes place in concert. If one is working well, the other is usually working well.

What's the wait time typically like?

Wait time is mostly an issue when you're waiting for a kidney alone. On the liver list, patients are triaged according to the severity of their liver disease because the aim is to try to catch people before things become critical. So you can be exceedingly ill, go on the liver list, and be transplanted that day.

What makes the Jefferson Transplant Institute special?

We're unique in that we have a four-day liver transplant workup process where patients can come in during that week and get all of their testing done and finalize their candidacy. If patients come from a great distance, they may stay at the Gift of Life House, which is a tremendous adjunct. It's a short cab ride from there to Jefferson. If they have the means to pay, they're asked to pay $40 a night. If they don't have the means, the Gift of Life team will work with the patient and family to sort out their arrangements.

We also have a tremendous track record. Our one-year patient survival rate is the best in the region, and we're quite proud of that. It takes about three months to fully recover from these kinds of transplants, but once patients do, they can get back to all the activities they love to do. I don't think people understand just how healthy our postoperative patients become. Having a liver transplant is truly reconstructive surgery; it helps restore people's lives.

To learn more, visit JeffersonHealth.org/TransplantInstitute.

I received the gift of life — times two — and I'm back on track.

Ten years ago I was diagnosed with polycystic kidney disease which would eventually cause my kidneys and liver to fail. Thanks to Jefferson, I was blessed with the gift of life, twice. I received both a kidney and liver transplant – and more precious time with my family. Now, I'm back to my active self – caring for others, loving life and training for my next 5K.

Iran urges Europe to normalize economic ties with it or face consequences

France, Britain and Germany are concerned with Iran's ballistic missile development.

Iran said on Sunday that Europe was in no position to criticize Tehran for its military capabilities and it called on European leaders to normalize trade ties with the Islamic Republic despite U.S. sanctions, or face consequences.

President Donald Trump last year withdrew the United States from world powers' 2015 nuclear deal with Iran and reimposed sweeping sanctions. Trump condemned the accord, signed by his predecessor Barack Obama, as flawed for not being permanent and for not covering Iran's ballistic missile program or its role in conflicts around the Middle East.

The West European signatories to the deal — France, Britain and Germany — share the same concerns as the United States over Iran's ballistic missile development and regional activities.

However, they have defended the nuclear accord as the best way to limit Iran's enrichment of uranium, a potential pathway to nuclear weapons, and a basis for future negotiations on a broader palette of security and other long-standing disputes.

"Europeans are not in a position to criticize Iran for issues outside the JCPOA," Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif was quoted as saying by the state broadcaster, using the acronym for the nuclear deal.

> "Europeans are not in a position to criticize Iran for issues outside the JCPOA."
> Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif

"The Europeans and other signatories of the JCPOA should normalize economic ties with Iran. ... We will halt our commitments or will take action in accordance with their measures."

Last month, Iran scaled back some commitments under the 2015 deal and warned that in 60 days it would resume enriching uranium to a higher degree than that permitted by the accord if the Europeans failed to shield it against the U.S. sanctions, which aim to cripple its oil-dependent economy.

German Foreign Minister Heiko Maas will visit Iran this week to explore options for preserving the fraying nuclear non-proliferation pact.

Iranian Parliament Speaker Ali Larijani on Sunday criticized French President Emmanuel Macron for saying last week in a meeting with Trump that they shared the same objectives on Iran.

Macron said France wanted to make sure Tehran will not get nuclear weapons: "We had an accord until 2025 and we want to go further and have full certainty in the long run. ... [Then] reduce ballistic activity and contain Iran regionally."

Larijani was quoted as saying by state media: "The recent remarks by the French president in a meeting with Trump were shameful and inept. ... Macron's comments did not match what he has been telling our president ... in their meetings and on the phone."

Iran insists its nuclear activities are entirely peaceful, and has repeatedly refused to discuss its missile program. REUTERS

Extradition protest plunges Hong Kong into political crisis against extradition law

The law would allow suspects to be sent to China to face trial.

Riot police surrounded Hong Kong's parliament early on Monday after what had been a peaceful million-strong protest against an extradition bill descended into running clashes between police and protesters.

Several hundred riot police armed with batons, shields, tear gas guns and pepper spray sealed off the Legislative Council as a similar number of protesters charged their lines shortly after midnight, Reuters witnesses said.

Police used batons and fired pepper spray at protesters, who still managed to close off part of a nearby road. Several people on both sides appeared to be injured, and ambulances were called. Metal barriers were left twisted and torn in the clashes.

The Legislative Council is where debates will start on Wednesday to pass a new government bill that will allow suspects wanted in mainland China to be sent across the border for trial.

Earlier on Sunday, hundreds of thousands had jammed Hong Kong's streets to protest the bill in the biggest demonstration in years. Many said they feared it put the city's vaunted legal independence at risk.

The rallies — and the violence — plunge the global financial hub into a fresh political crisis, with marchers and opposition leaders demanding the bill be shelved and that the city's Beijing-backed Chief Executive Carrie Lam resign.

After seven hours of marching, organizers estimated 1,030,000 people took part, far outstripping a demonstration in 2003 when half that number hit the streets to successfully challenge government plans for tighter national security laws.

A police spokesman said police estimated 240,000 were on the march "at its peak."

"She (Lam) has to withdraw the bill and resign," veteran Democratic Party lawmaker James To told crowds gathering outside the council and government headquarters in the Admiralty business district on Sunday night.

"The whole of Hong Kong is against her."

As To spoke, thousands were still arriving at the march that started five hours earlier and filled four lanes of a major thoroughfare.

Some sat in a nearby park singing gospel standard "Hallelujah" even as ranks of riot police started to congregate.

Lam had yet to comment on the rally and the future of the bill, which could be passed into law by the end of June. She has tweaked the amendments but refused to pull the bill, saying it is vital to plug a long-standing "loophole."

> "She (Lam) has to withdraw the bill and resign."
> James To, veteran Democratic Party lawmaker

The demonstration capped weeks of growing outrage in the business, diplomatic and legal communities, and human rights groups, which fear corrosion of Hong Kong's rule of law and the lack of a fair and open legal system on the mainland.

The former British colony was handed back to China in 1997 amid guarantees of autonomy and various freedoms including a separate legal system, which many diplomats and business leaders believe is its strongest remaining asset. REUTERS

Blood, sweat, no tears in 'office chair grand prix'

The rattle of tiny plastic wheels echoed through the normally sleepy streets of Hanyu on Sunday morning as the small city 60 kilometers north of Tokyo played host to the Japan office chair "Isu" grand prix.

Founded 10 years ago and inspired by Formula One and Le Mans endurance racing, the race sees teams of three battle it out on ordinary office furniture across two grueling hours to see who can complete the most laps of the 200-meter course.

Propelling the chair backward was the universal tactic employed by the racers, who were at least spared the added constriction of business dress, with competitors choosing their own outfits.

The three team members rotated during the race, Le Mans-style, to try and stay fresh, but in the dense summer humidity it proved a tough battle for even the most experienced racers.

The series, which started with a race in Kyoto in 2009, was the brainchild of Tsuyoshi Tahara and will feature at 10 different grand prix events across Japan this year.

"The origin of this race came to my head when I saw a tricycle endurance race," Tahara explained to Reuters.

"Eventually I created the race, which we can hold on a street, three persons per team for two hours of endurance.

"I wanted to create something no one has made before."

Tahara's idea has proved surprisingly popular, with 55 teams entering the Hanyu Grand Prix alone and hailing from as far away as Wakayama, 600 kilometers to the south.

The winning team, Kitsugawa Unyu, come from Kyoto and so had also traveled several hours with their chairs for the race.

Their reward was retaining the title they won last year and a prize of 90 kilograms of local rice, which the "drivers" struggled to pick up such was their fatigue.

The endurance test had taken its toll on the participants but spirits remained high as tired bodies staggered away from the event.

"I was tricked [into doing it]," joked 45-year-old Satoru Taguchi, who formed a team with other fathers from his children's school.

"My body is badly sore."

Mayu Negishi, who had just enough energy left to dance at the closing ceremony, said the support of the crowd had helped greatly.

"So many people cheered for us every time we passed and came around the corners," said the 18-year-old.

"We were very touched. They are our fans and supporters."

The next Isu grand prix takes place in Iwate next month. REUTERS

TAKE OFF YOUR BACKPACK

We are all trapped together underground in a steel death trap that is barely staying on the tracks. So it starts pretty rough, but now headphones help a lot. A lot. But there is one more simple thing we can do: Take off your stupid backpack. I know it is your right to not care about anyone around you. But the thing is, if we all take our backpacks off, we will all have more room.

Remember, summer is basically here. This is not the time to be close together, trapped underground in a steel death trap when everyone smells particularly aromatic. Remove the bag, make room and you might not have an armpit in your face to start and end your day.

Aries An open mind will help you see situations differently. Don't rule out what's possible due to fear of failure or the criticism you might face from demanding individuals.

Taurus You can make a change if you use your intellect, connections and experience to your advantage. If you show strength and conviction, onlookers will respect and support you.

Gemini New beginnings are favored. Take pride in your appearance and actions. Refuse to let anyone meddle in your affairs or tamper with your emotions.

Cancer Diligence will come in handy when making changes at home that will influence your daily routine. You'll receive accolades from those who benefit from your insight and updates.

Leo Generosity can be costly. Emotionally motivated spending is not an option, nor is trying to buy someone's love. Put your wallet away and offer kindness and understanding. Bring joy to others through laughter.

Virgo Simplicity will be useful when dealing with loved ones and making personal adjustments. If you are honest about what you want to see happen, you'll get the help you need.

Libra Personal growth will help you realize what you want and how to go about making it happen. Question what you are doing and why, and change situations that are no longer suitable.

Scorpio Live and learn. Experience is the spice of life, and it will help point you in a direction that will make you happy. Stay on top of current trends and keep moving forward.

Sagittarius If someone plays with your emotions, walk away. Look for people and partners who are not intrusive. Call the shots instead of putting up with unnecessary interference.

Capricorn A change at home will turn out better than anticipated. Do the preliminary work and save a bundle. Loved ones will pitch in and help once they see your plans kick into gear.

Aquarius An opportunity will arise for something you want to do. Don't hesitate or let anyone interfere. Take action and do whatever is necessary to pursue your goal.

Pisces Your input will be welcome if you volunteer your time or services. Someone you meet will offer suggestions that will help you expand your interests, skills and relationships. EUGENIA LAST

5 Fun things to do at Philly parks this summer

Don't miss outdoor yoga, movies under the stars and more.

MADELINE PRESLAND
letters@metro.us

One day it's time for yoga, and the next is filled with adventure at the zip-lining course. There are so many ways to get outside and appreciate your local parks this summer for both adrenaline enthusiasts and relaxation fans. From pop-ups to seasonal destinations, add these Philly park activities to your summer to-do list.

Outdoor Yoga in Fairmount Park

Find your bliss and test your skills during outdoor yoga sessions at the Reflecting Pool at the Horticulture Center in West Fairmount Park. The classes meet every Sunday morning in June from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Enjoy scenic views, vinyasa yoga and being able to learn alongside yogis of all experience levels. In the event of rain, classes move to the beautiful greenhouse inside the Center. Attendees should plan to bring their own yoga mat and water bottle. Proceeds from ticket sales benefit the Fairmount Park Conservancy.
Through June, 100 N. Horticultural Dr., $15, free for Conservancy members

Pride Month and Immigration Heritage Month at LOVE Park

LOVE Park (North 16th Street and JFK Boulevard) is the place to be this June. Colorful new decorations in honor of Pride Month and Immigration Heritage Month make the park look even more beautiful after its recent renovation, and the fun keeps going with special events and daily additions to the park's programming. Enjoy a peaceful weekend morning during donation-based yoga classes at 11 a.m. on Sundays in June to benefit Roots2Rise, and catch live music performances on Fridays. Don't forget to stop by the park for weekday lunches to try a different lineup of food trucks every day.

Spend your summer at one of Philly's gorgeous parks. ALBERT YEE

Treetop Quest

Become an outdoor adventurer without leaving the city. Outdoor amusement park and aerial adventure course Treetop Quest is open in West Fairmount Park seven days a week for the summer. There are several courses and difficulty levels for both children and adults. Spend a few hours navigating obstacles like climbing cargo nets and walking on balance beams, and zip-lining through the trees. You can pay per visit, or purchase season passes for unlimited visits until the course closes in November.
51 Chamounix Dr., $19-$51, treetopquest.com

Trails to Ales Runs

Combine your visit to Parks on Tap with a serious workout. Hit the trails in East and West Fairmount Park when Parks on Tap visits locations like Lemon Hill and Fairmount Water Works. Go on a guided run to explore the hidden and lesser-known trails near these popular park destinations. The runs will be anywhere from four to six miles, and though the group will be led with a 10-minute-mile pace, runners are encouraged to go at their own pace and enjoy the park. Parks on Tap is the finish line, so you can reward yourself for your hard work with beer and snacks.
Multiple dates, multiple locations, $15, free for Conservancy members

Movies in the Park

Watching outdoor films during Movies in the Park is a Philly summer tradition. Get ready to pack a tasty picnic and bring your own blankets to catch films at your local park. The big screen is visiting parks all over Philly this summer, including Penn Treaty Park right by the river in Fishtown and the scenic Upper Roxborough Reservoir Preserve. The movie selections this year are a mix of family-friendly box office hits and Pixar classics.

Ashleigh Cummings on balancing courage and vulnerability in 'NOS4A2'

The actress stars alongside Zachary Quinto in the new AMC horror series.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Ashleigh Cummings as Vic McQueen in "NOS4A2." ZACH DILGARD/AMC

While many are trying to find the next show to dig their fangs into after the end of such beloved shows like "Game of Thrones" and "Veep," many networks have been rolling out some truly bold original series to captivate a new generation of audiences. This month, AMC introduced viewers to the strange, and oftentimes unsettling, world of "NOS4A2" starring Zachary Quinto and Ashleigh Cummings.

Pronounced like the classic vampire film "Nosferatu," the series is an adaptation of the successful book by author Joe Hill. The story follows a high school student named Victoria "Vic" McQueen, played by Cummings, who is a gifted art student from a working-class home in a rich neighborhood who struggles to deal with the complex emotions hiding beneath her skin. Vic begins to realize that she has an uncanny premonition to pinpoint the location of an ageless vampire, Charlie Manx, who feeds on the souls of children and stows them away in a nightmarish dumping ground known as "Christmasland."

Manx is played by the shape-shifting Quinto, who uses ghastly prosthetics and physicality to bring the demented character to life.

While this show and its source material bring a delightfully spine-tingling kind of scare, with great performances by both Quinto and Cummings, it also brings to life a kind of hero that is rarely represented onscreen these days. Cummings plays Vic with a tremendous amount of empathy, and the writing around her character shows tremendous levels of emotion and inner turmoil under her hard exterior.

"I really enjoyed that she is three-dimensional and extremely flawed as much as she is a hero," says Cummings. "The thing that is celebrated about her are particularly feminine qualities that society has cast aside in favor of the superhero movies that we see today that are the strong action heroes, male or female. It's incredibly empowering to see women up on the screen, but the character of Vic has one other element to her which is the typically feminine quality that fuels her in conjunction with the wonderful masculine qualities."

Vic lives her life with her back against the wall, with trouble at home and at school, all while grappling with this quest she must go on to save numerous helpless children from the clutches of Manx. It's a lot to have on someone's plate, and those emotional levels were what originally drew Cummings to the character.

"What I can relate to, especially during that period of growing up, is that immensity of emotion that Vic feels," explains Cummings, "That was definitely something in my experience and I didn't have anywhere to channel that in that time, and I didn't know it was okay to feel that way and to those extremes of both the joys and sadnesses of life. There are so many people that feel in extraordinary ways and I think Vic is someone who has that depth of emotion and I think it's really interesting to see how she channels it. I think it would be valuable for people to look at it and understand that with our parenting we can really start to embrace humans like this and not be afraid of our emotions."

As Cummings got to battle it out with Quinto onscreen, she says it was a little shocking to work with him given his horrific appearance on the show.

"Zach is one of the nicest people I have ever met. He's so sweet and loving and then he turns into Charlie Manx and is terrifying!" she says with a laugh. "It's just a testament to his acting abilities and his ability to transform, with the physicality of it. Sometimes it's a bit challenging to hate him [laughs], because I have so much love for the guy. I think the prosthetics really help, because you can't see much of Zach in there. He's such an inspiration to me both personally and professionally."

5 Fun things to do in Philly this week

Watch an outdoor movie on the big screen, celebrate the opening of Drexel Square and more.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Looking for some fun and unique things to do in Philly this week? We've got you covered.

"'Once,' Twice!"
The Arden Theatre Company's 2018 production of "Once" was record-setting for the theater, and this Monday night the cast of "Once" are returning to the stage for a special event benefitting the artistic and educational programming at the Arden. The talented cast will be belting out some classic and popular tunes and also bringing all of the beloved songs from the popular production back to life during this colorful evening, including the Academy Award-winning song "Falling Slowly." Philadelphians can purchase general admission or VIP tickets. VIP tickets include a pre-show dinner with a few songs being sung live by the cast and preferred seating. Everyone is also invited to a Dublin-themed after-party once the show ends. June 10, 7 p.m., Arden Theatre Company, 40 N. 2nd St., $100-$250, ardentheatre.org

Cookie Diorio. BRENDA TEAH TATE

Drexel Square opening
Drexel Square, the 1.3-acre community park in the heart of University City and the first public space to be completed in the Schuylkill Yards project, is finally opening this week, and in celebration there will be an evening filled with plenty of exciting nighttime activities. Philadelphians can enjoy lawn games, a live DJ, retro arcade games, food trucks and more this Monday night. Plus, according to the release, the community will also be invited to the park to view the world's largest video game display in partnership with Drexel University's Entrepreneurial Game Studio. Students and teachers from K-12 schools across the Greater Philadelphia region have been working with experts at Drexel University's Entrepreneurial Game Studio, including Dr. Frank Lee, to design and code new games for the building. The students and teachers will take the controls and show off their new games. Philadelphians can also enter into a drawing for a chance to step up and play as well. June 10, 6-9:30 p.m., Drexel Square Park, 3001 Market St., free, brandywinerealty.com

monthly themes: June will be "Record Stores," July will feature "'90s Throwbacks" and August will highlight "Unconventional Love Stories." Each movie shown will also have a specialty themed cocktail for just $6 to go along with the feature. This Wednesday, La Peg will be showing "High Fidelity" starring John Cusack and will feature their Sonic Monkey cocktail made with gin, lemon, blackberry syrup, mint and soda. Future movies include "Pretty in Pink," "Empire Records," "Space Jam," "She's All That," "Cruel Intentions," "Romy and Michele's High School Reunion," "Working Girl," "Dumb and Dumber" and "Raising Arizona." All of the movies will be shown on a large projector in La Peg's outdoor area beneath the Ben Franklin Bridge. Screenings start at 8:30 p.m., but at 8 p.m. there will be a themed quizzo to kick off the festivities. Every Wednesday this summer, 8 p.m., La Peg, 140 N. Christopher Columbus Blvd., free, lapegbrasserie.com

Barnes Takeover

Head to the Barnes Foundation this Thursday to enjoy their third and final Takeover of 2019. This Takeover will feature drag songstress Cookie Diorio and her new collection at the foundation, "Out of the Oven, Into the Barnes," before it heads to the galleries. Cookie is a classically trained vocalist and songwriter and will present her musical self-portrait in three phases: mind, body and spirit. According to the release, Cookie's performance is inspired by Dr. Barnes's one-of-a-kind ensembles — the unconventional wall displays that combine paintings and objects from different cultures and time periods. June 13, 8-10 p.m., Barnes Foundation, 2025 Benjamin Franklin Parkway, $10-$12, barnesfoundation.org

Pappy Picnic

Head to Abe Fisher this Thursday and bring along your Pappy for an early Father's Day celebration. The delicious four-course meal will feature a plethora of mouthwatering dishes including borscht tartar with sour cream and onion chips, caviar and an eight-minute egg; smoked hamachi dip with lettuce cups, gribenes, tomato-ramp salad and thai basil; sour cream gnocchi with fava bean and black truffle; hot smoked salmon with "everything" spice, dried tomato and melted leek; corned beef tongue with spicy kraut and peach mustard; Quark cheese panna cotta with stewed cherries and "sweetie" spiced meringue; and much more. The meal will also come with a special Van Winkle bourbon sample paired with each course. June 13, reservations are available, Abe Fisher, 1623 Sansom St., abefisherphilly.com

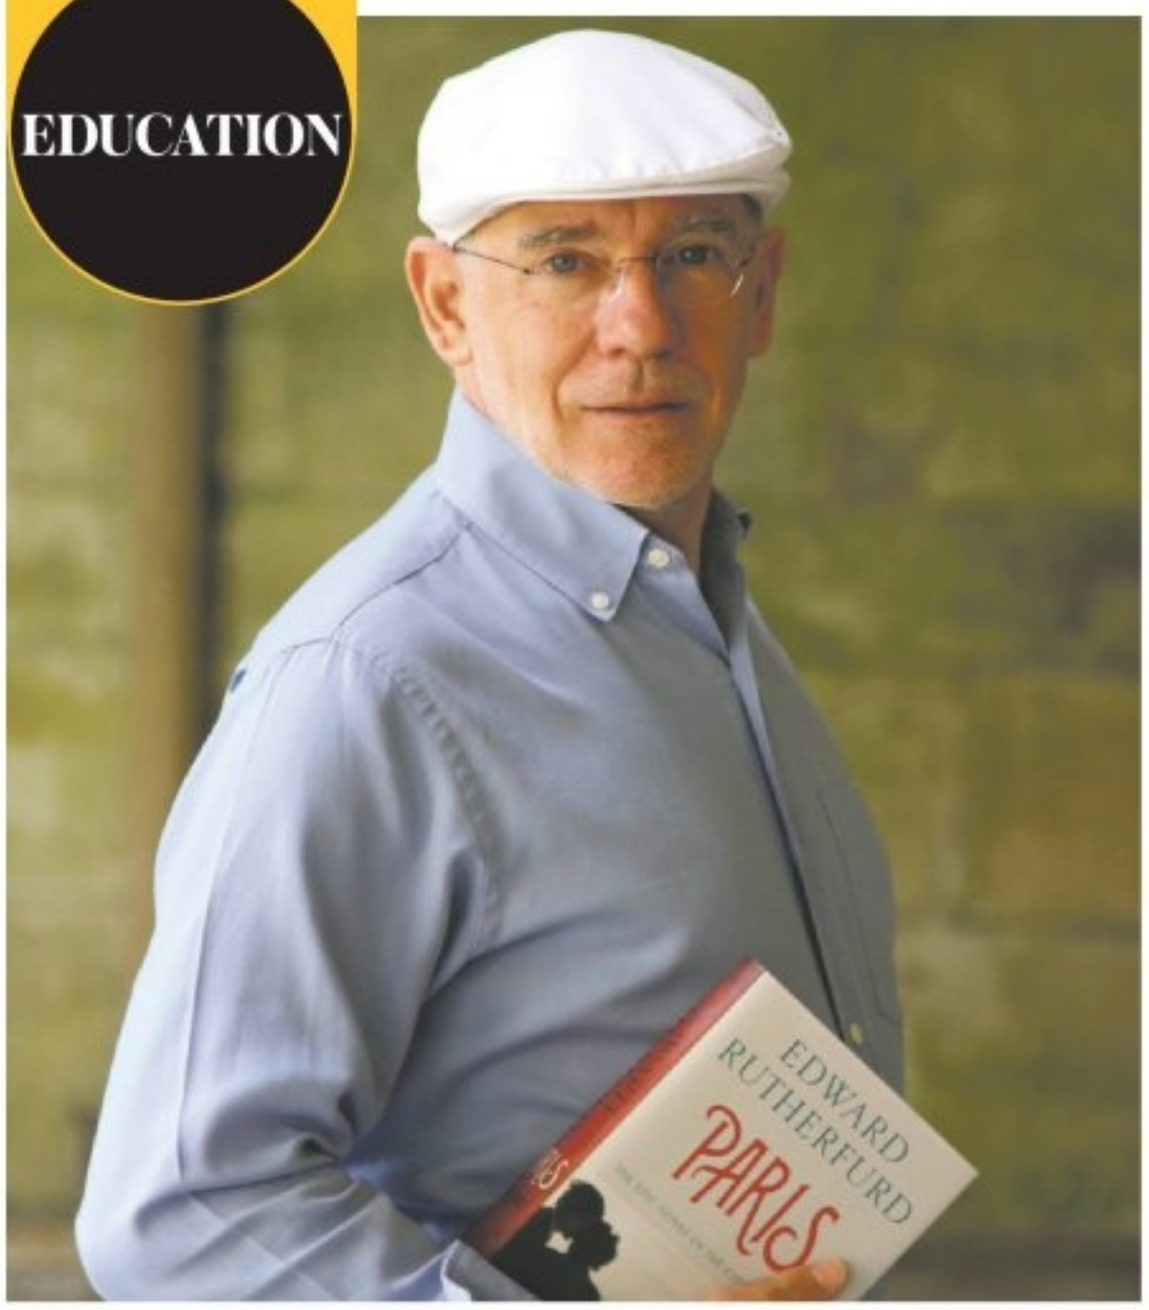
EDUCATION



The history of mankind, told through cities

EDWARD RUTHERFURD

The English writer has managed to catch the attention of thousands of readers by telling of the past in an attractive and unique way.

LUZ LANCHEROS
letters@metro.us

When talking about the History of Humanity in capital letters, we usually think about some dates, big names. But we forget that it forms part of our present and future, and that it defines us, because those who made it were thousands of men, women and children who once lived in their cities and created language, culture and memory.

This is what the writer Edward Rutherfurd (real name Francis Edward Wintle) describes in his series of epic historical novels which span long periods of history but are set in particular places. His books set in London, Sarum, New York, Paris and countries such as Russia tell a story — which sometimes seems cyclical — through buildings, music and people.

Metro spoke with Rutherfurd to learn more.

Why did you pick these cities and places to tell the stories?
Well, there are places with which I've had some personal connection. Sarum, in England, is the place where I was born and where my childhood developed. Russia was where my grandfather used to live, and I was fascinated by this place. London is supposed to be the one I know best, where I worked and had a lot of happiness as a young man. If we talk about cities, I lived in New York for a while and my children grew up there. That meant a lot to me.

There is a little girl from India in the "New York" book who starts the book, and another girl who continues it. They reflect the relationship I have with my daughter. It is very emotional. My friends also come from immigrant families, so I was inspired by that when trying to describe immigration. Now, if we talk about the books of Ireland, I spent a lot of time there and wrote about this place for my Irish friends. At the beginning I thought of only one book, but two came up because there was a lot of material. If we talk about "Paris," part of my family is French. I have 14 cousins living there.

Which city represents the future for you?
Probably New York. By the 1950s, New York had the electrical industry and the port. There was the world of small factories, the "West Side Story." Then they left, and the city became a financial center — and something amazing happened. People love being win a vibrant city full of culture. They want to live there, and the companies started coming back. They have to do something about housing, because the prices are ridiculous. But you'd be surprised how quickly things change. Thirty years ago it was not like that. The city will become an even bigger epicenter of the industry. And it will be the center of culture and society because it is a fun place to be.

Sports betting 101: Terminology

SugarHouse Casino's sportsbook manager dishes out the basics of sports betting.

JIM LLEWELLYN

Jim Llewellyn is the sportsbook manager at SugarHouse Casino.

GETTY IMAGES

One of the more exciting aspects of now having sports betting at PA.PlaySugarHouse.com/METROBET is that many people will be betting on games for the first time. Having a few dollars riding on the Birds or the Phillies or that random Monday Night Football game just makes things that much more fun. For you first-timers out there, here is some sports-betting lingo and basic terminology that will help you place your bets.

ATS – Against the Spread: Instead of a team's win-loss record it refers to how well a certain team has done in terms of the spread over the course of their season. For instance, the Eagles are 5-1 against the spread in their last six games.

Each game has a favorite and an underdog. When you bet against the spread you are betting on the favorite to win by a certain number of points, or you are betting on the underdog to either win the game outright or lose by less than the point spread.

Cover: When you beat the spread by the required number of points. If you pick the favorite in the game you "cover the spread" when you win by more than the spread. If you pick the underdog, you win by winning outright or by losing less than the spread. For example, if the Eagles are four-point favorites and win by seven, they "cover the spread."

Futures: A bet based on how well a certain team does for the whole season. For instance, as of Friday, June 7, the Phillies have +1200 odds of winning the World Series at PA.PlaySugarHouse.com/METROBET.

Hedging: When you bet the opposite of your original bet to minimize a potential loss.

In-game bet: When you bet on a game while the game is being played.

D-Backs vs. Phillies betting preview

D-Backs at Phillies
Betting Total: 9.5
Pitching matchups are key when betting on baseball.

Tonight's matchup at Citizens Bank Park between the Phillies and Diamondbacks features Arizona righty Taylor Clarke (1-2, 4.43 ERA) and Phillies righty Jerad Eickhoff (3-3, 4.14 ERA).

The Phils should be able to take advantage of Clarke, who is quite green – particularly as a starter. The 26-year-old earned his first major league win in late May but is one bad outing away from being sent back down to the minors.

To bet now on D-Backs vs. Phillies, go to PA.PlaySugarHouse.com/METROBET and get up to $250 in a first-deposit match bonus by using promo code: METROBET.

Clarke's pedestrian numbers in the majors so far this year are actually better than the stats he was putting up with Triple-A Reno. This year down on the farm, Clarke had an ugly 7.22 ERA in 33-2/3 innings.

Arizona's bats should keep them in this game, however. The D-Backs' offense is hot, having scored at least six runs in each of their past three games.

Be sure to be on the PA page.

Step 3: Click "Join now"!

Step 4: Enter a Screen Name to use for betting, as well as an email address and password to access the PA.PlaySugarHouse.com/METROBET site.

Step 5: Enter promo code: METROBET

Step 6: You're ready to bet online!

Site navigation

The PA.PlaySugarHouse.com/METROBET site is straightforward and easy to use for first-time bettors. On the left hand side of the page you will see a "My Bet History" option, a "Jackpot Parlay" option and options to bet on multiple sports like the NBA, MLB, NHL, NFL, golf, soccer and more.

For example, if you wanted to bet on tonight's Phillies vs. D-Backs game, you would simply click on "MLB" in the left-hand column. There you will find all of the betting odds on every MLB game on the slate that day.

If you want to bet on the Phillies, you would click on the blue button with the current Phillies odds (such as PHI Phillies -143).

Once you click on the blue button, a betting slip will pop up in the bottom-right-hand corner. There you enter how much money you want to wager.

Happy betting!

Moneyline: Warriors +135, Raptors -155
Betting Total: 211.5 points

Bettors could have gotten 10-1 odds on the Raptors winning the series in five games prior to Game 1, but that long-shot play looks like a sure thing now.

To bet now, go to PA.PlaySugarHouse.com/METROBET and get up to $250 in a first-deposit match bonus by using promo code: METROBET

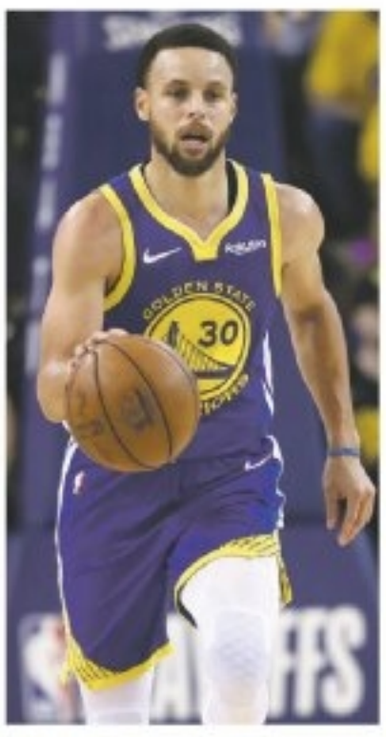
Toronto shut down the woebegone Warriors in Game 4, limiting them to 92 points. Golden State made just 45 percent of their shots, including a weak 30 percent mark from the 3-point line. They also committed a backbreaking 19 turnovers. Klay Thompson, who missed Game 3 with a hamstring issue, led the team in scoring at 28 points while Stephen Curry added 27, but secondary contributions for the Warriors were virtually nonexistent. Draymond Green and a less-than-full-strength Kevon Looney managed just 10 points apiece.



Meanwhile, Kawhi Leonard was his usual brilliant self for the Raptors, notching 36 points on 12-for-22 shooting. Toronto's "big bodies" Serge Ibaka and Pascal Siakam added 20 and 19 points, respectively.

The Warriors' will appears to be broken, and it doesn't look like Kevin Durant will play in this series at any point. The Raptors have been a great bet of late, covering in seven of their last eight postseason contests, so take Toronto to seal the deal at home on Monday night.

The play: Raptors -2

Women's World Cup day in review

ITALY 2 - 0 AUSTRALIA

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

A 20-year wait for the Italians was quickly forgotten on Sunday when Le Azzurre provided the first upset of the Women's World Cup with a 2-1 victory over Group C favorites Australia.

Barbara Bonansea recorded a second-half brace (both goals) for Italy, the winner coming in the final minute of stoppage time. It's Italy's first win at the World Cup since a 2-0 group-stage triumph over Mexico in 1999.

Australia grabbed an expected opener in the 22nd minute when Sam Kerr finished a rebound off a saved penalty pushed out well by Italian goalkeeper Laura Guliani.

The Italians grabbed the equalizer in the 56th minute when a mistake on Australia's backline delivered Bonansea with clear space down the left wing. The forward meandered toward the middle of the box and slotted a shot while falling into the far corner.

Australia dominated most of the match with 57 percent of the possession while outshooting Italy, 17-5. Le Azzurre, however, were far more efficient with the chances they created as they shockingly sit amongst the top half of Group C after Matchday 1.

BRAZIL 3 - 0 JAMAICA

Order was restored in Group C just hours after Italy's upset of Australia.

The other group favorite, Brazil, cruised to a 3-0 victory over tournament newcomers Jamaica to start their World Cup in style.

After an eight-year wait between World Cup goals, Brazil's veteran forward Christiane recorded a hat trick to provide the Canarinhas with all the firepower necessary.

The trio of tallies were the eighth, ninth and 10th career goals at the World Cup for the 34-year-old, who plays her club soccer with Sao Paolo in Brazil.

She opened the scoring in the 15th minute with a powerful header that left Jamaica keeper and New Jersey native Sydney Schneider with no chance.

The last line of Jamaica's defense was sterling despite conceding three goals on the day, making three saves including a penalty stop on Andressa in the 38th minute.

Christiane recorded her next two goals in 14 minutes during the second half, including a breathtaking free kick in the 64th minute to clinch a solid opener for the Brazilians.

ENGLAND 2 - 1 SCOTLAND

The opening match of Group D play provided a glimpse at one of the oldest rivalries in soccer as England hang on to a 2-1 victory over Scotland to close out Sunday's slate of games.

England got off to a fast start, taking a 2-0 lead in the first half.

A VAR-prompted handball led to Nikita Parris slotting in her first-ever World Cup goal from the penalty spot. The 25-year-old was voted England's top women's soccer player of the year by the Football Writer's Association in April after a brilliant campaign with Manchester City.

Ellen White doubled England's lead in the 40th minute after curling a left-footed effort sublimely past Lee Alexander to seemingly put the Three Lionesses in the driver's seat.

Scotland, making its World Cup debut, made things interesting in the closing stages of the match as England attempted to close things out.

A turnover led to Claire Emslie powering her way through the England defense to record Scotland's first-ever goal at the World Cup in the 79th minute. But that was as close as they would come to stealing a point on Sunday.

Late Reds rally knocks off Phillies

Three-run seventh inning from Reds snaps the Phils' four-game win streak.

REUTERS
sports@metro.us

Eugenio Suarez's single capped a three-run seventh inning and the visiting Cincinnati Reds rallied past the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-3, on Sunday to snap a three-game losing streak.

The Reds trailed 3-1 when Curt Casali singled with two outs and pinch hitter Josh VanMeter walked. Jose Alvarez (0-2) replaced Philadelphia starter Aaron Nola and allowed a single to Nick Senzel to load the bases before Joey Votto lined a first-pitch single to center to score Casali and VanMeter.

Suarez followed with a single off Vince Velasquez to score Senzel and give the Reds the lead.

Zach Duke (3-1) pitched one-third of an inning and got the win as four Cincinnati relievers combined for 3 1/3 scoreless innings. Raisel Iglesias got the final four outs for his 13th save.

Nola was charged with three runs on four hits in 6 2/3 innings.

Reds starter Sonny Gray allowed three runs on four hits over 5 2/3 innings.

For the third straight game, the Reds took an early 1-0 lead. Derek Dietrich led off the second with a single, went to third on Jose Iglesias's single and scored on a groundout by Jose Peraza.

The Phillies, who had won four straight, pulled ahead in the third with the help of the sun and the replay rule.

Maikel Franco led off with a single and Cesar Hernandez drew a one-out walk. After Bryce Harper hit into a fielder's choice, he stole second and Jean Segura walked.

Rhys Hoskins then hit a high infield pop that first baseman Votto lost in the sun. The ball dropped near first base as Franco scored. Second baseman Dietrich picked up the ball and threw home. Harper was initially called out, but the Phillies challenged the call and the replay showed Harper touched home before the tag and the Phillies led 2-1.

In the fifth, Hernandez walked, stole second, went to third on Harper's single and scored on a sacrifice fly by Segura.
